

GIVING TO THE JACOBS SCHOOL OF MUSIC

A LASTING LEGACY

By Lynn Lewis

Marvin Carmack's eyes light up when he talks about Jack and Linda Gill. The relationship created when Jack came to Bloomington in 1958 to study organic chemistry with Professor Carmack continues today, with frequent contact between the two men. Marvin says it was easy to see, even in those early years, that the future was bright for Jack Gill.

Jack grew up in the small east Texas town of Lufkin. His father, who had only a sixth grade education, worked 70-hour weeks in highway construction. By the age of 10, Jack was working as a church janitor; later, he bagged groceries and mopped floors to support himself through an engineering and chemistry degree from Lamar University and a Ph.D. in organic chemistry at IU. His dad's advice, "work hard, lead a clean, God-fearing life, rely on yourself, and get all the education you can," has stayed with Jack all his life.

After leaving Indiana, Jack started his career with the Monsanto Corporation, but quickly moved on to start a multifaceted career in Silicon Valley. Jack's invention of a computer used in chemical analysis led him to international travel and (Marvin says) to a particular interest in European culture and French wines. Following that success, Jack embarked on yet another career as the founder and general partner of Vanguard Ventures, a leading high-tech venture capital firm. Then came yet another career—as a university faculty member at Harvard, MIT, Rice, and IU. Jack also serves on numerous corporate, foundation, and nonprofit boards.

Throughout their lives, Jack and his wife Linda (a strong supporter of her alma mater, the University of Kentucky) have placed a high value on their educational experiences and those of their four children (who have collectively earned 11 college degrees—two of them from IU). Gill family members make it a priority to give back for all that they have received and Indiana University has been the beneficiary of that support and friendship. Jack presently serves on the IU Foundation Board, the Dean's Advisory Councils of the Kelley School of Business and the College of Arts and Sciences, and the Dean's Advisory Board of the School of Music. Jack and Linda have demonstrated their belief in making a difference by creating important initiatives in the Kelley School of Business, the College of Arts and Sciences, and the Medical School, including the Gill Center for Biomolecular Science, the Gill Chair in Entrepreneurship, the Marvin Carmack Chair in Bio-organic Chemistry, the Velocity Conference, five chairs in the College of Arts and Sciences, and numerous fellowships and scholarships.

The School of Music has also benefited from the Gills' friendship and financial support. In addition to substantial annual giving, Jack and Linda, in 1997, endowed the Linda Challis Gill and Jack M. Gill Scholarship in Music. In 2000, the Gills made a gift for the purchase of five Steinway grand pianos for faculty studios in the School of Music and also established the Gill Chair in Violin. The chair is presently held by internationally famed violinist Alexander Kerr.

In 2002, Jack joined awardees such as Colin Powell and Oprah Winfrey when he was honored by the Horatio Alger Association of Distinguished Americans. Jack and Linda have worked tirelessly in that organization's scholarship program to help educate America's youth about the limitless possibilities available to them through the free-enterprise system, and have endowed 16 Horatio Alger full college scholarships in both Indiana and Kentucky.

One of Jack's favorite study venues while at IU was in the School of Music, sitting outside a practice room listening to a talented student rehearse. Professor Carmack likes to think that his own love of opera and his faithful attendance at School of Music performances also inspired the Gills' love of music, as Jack and Linda often send him opera recordings and DVDs from their extensive collection. The relationship of a professor and his student can be very special. Knowing Marvin Carmack has surely enriched the lives of Jack and Linda Gill. Marvin would tell you that it was just the other way around.

DEAN'S CIRCLE

The Indiana University School of Music Dean's Circle includes individuals dedicated to making a difference in the cultural life of our nation. These gifts of opportunity capital support the areas of greatest need including financial aid, faculty, academic opportunity, and visiting artists.
