

The Starling Foundation and the Jacobs School of Music

In the early 1900s, in Meadville, PA, a young girl named Dorothy Richard fell in love with the violin. Her childhood studies of the instrument blossomed, resulting in her graduation, with honors, from the Pennsylvania College of Music in 1917. She went on to complete post-graduate study, with distinction, in 1918, and receive her Teacher's Certificate from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music in 1919. In 1920, she earned a scholarship to study with Eugene Ysaÿe, one of the most eminent violin teachers in history. The following year, Richard received a diploma cum laude for postgraduate work at the Cincinnati Conservatory. She pursued her studies with Leopold Auer from 1922 to 1925 and performed as a soloist with leading symphony orchestras. Seemingly, the sky was the limit for this supremely gifted young musician.

In 1930, Richard was forced to cut her violin career short, for medical reasons. However, nothing could curtail her passion for the instrument. In 1969, her husband, Frank M. Starling, created the Dorothy Richard Starling Foundation in her memory. The foundation supports institutions for purposes directly related to classical violin performance and study at its highest levels.

The Starling Foundation began its close association with the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music in 1983, when it generously funded an annual Starling Foundation Scholarship, which continued for 14 years. In 1986, the foundation endowed an additional scholarship, in the name of renowned violin professor Josef Gingold. The Josef Gingold Violin Scholarship supports one of the Jacobs School's finest violinists each year.

Ayumi Paul, of Berlin, Germany, and a graduate student pursuing a Performer Diploma in violin, is this year's Gingold Scholarship recipient. She is thrilled to be given an opportunity to fulfill her dreams of studying with Mauricio Fuks at the Jacobs School. "It didn't seem real, until I was on the plane to Bloomington," Ayumi says, "Having the opportunity to study with someone like Professor Fuks, who is a former student of legendary violinist Jascha Heifetz and Ivan Galamian, seemed like reaching for the stars! Thank you [Starling Foundation] for making a dream come true! I will work very hard in order to be able to one day help other young people reach for their stars."

Ever seeking to pass on the rich tradition of classical music, the Starling Foundation funded the Dorothy Richard Starling Chair in Violin in 1996—the first endowed chair in the history of the school. This important position has been held by outstanding members of the violin faculty Franco Gulli and Miriam Fried, and it will soon be passed to another great violin faculty member at the Jacobs School.

STARLING FLEDGLINGS

Starling support for the IU String Academy (pre-college strings) and its director, Mimi Zweig, began in 2003. Zweig started the pre-college violin program at the IU

Jacobs School of Music in 1976 with just six students. This award-winning curriculum for violin and cello now enrolls 150 students between the ages of 4 and 18, all of whom study with teachers who have been specifically trained to work with pre-college string players. The String Academy has become a training ground for some of the best emerging violinists in the country.

Only the finest students in the String Academy are invited to join the Violin Virtuosi (VV). These gifted students live in Bloomington, the surrounding region, and sometimes as far as 200 miles away. They are immersed in an intense musical curriculum of weekly private lessons, chamber music, theory, master classes, and rehearsals. Over the years, the group has built a reputation as one of the world's unique performing ensembles. Its tours have included France, Sweden, Spain, Italy, and Japan, as well as performances extending around the U.S.A. Everywhere they go, the Virtuosi play to overwhelmingly enthusiastic audiences who are moved by their musical sensitivity, precision of ensemble, and joy of making music.

Former Violin Virtuosi students have made careers as soloists, chamber musicians, orchestra players, and teachers. Joshua Bell was one of the original members of the String Academy and has gone on to become one of the most which aired on over 220 public television stations around the country and was nominated for an Emmy Award. Former students have used the IU String Academy as a model for string programs at Northwestern University, The Peabody Conservatory, The String Academy at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, the University of Wyoming, and Violinissimo in Geneva, Switzerland, among others.

Starling support has given Zweig the opportunity to focus her attention on extraordinary performers in the world today. In addition, former student William Harvey won the 2006 Juilliard Violin Competition and has begun his own foundation, Cultures in Harmony, which forges connections across cultural and national barriers through the medium of music.

In addition to Zweig's teaching at IU, she leads master classes and pedagogy workshops throughout the United States and Europe. In 2002, she created Mimi Zweig String-Pedagogy, an innovative DVD and Web-based teaching tool for string teachers, students, and parents. In 2006, PBS released the documentary Circling Around—The Violin Virtuosi, pre-college teaching and on the training of future violin teachers. The Starling Foundation knows that the development of violinists must begin at an early age, and continue for many years. It is rare to find any organization that understands and is willing to underwrite this early education. The Starling Foundation sends the message to the world that string teaching is a unique and crucial profession that ensures the training of the next generation of "stars." ●

International Appreciation for the Violin Virtuosi

"I just want to thank you so much for what we got to experience during your visit here. It was simply an amazing concert with a standard of playing that I didn't think was possible. ...Your lessons with our students gave us all so much inspiration. I am really happy there are people like you, that can help young students to experience the special joy and satisfaction that making music is and at the same time getting them to understand the necessity to be able to master an instrument in doing this."

*Gunnar Crantz
Violin Professor
Falun, Sweden*

"I just wanted to transmit what people in Ferraz (now called Conservatory Adolfo Salazar) were saying about the concert. ...It was a pleasure to see these young players performing great music, seriously, but with joy and positive energy. We could also appreciate the hard work and discipline in the ensemble pieces."

*Anibal Banados
Director
Conservatory Adolfo Salazar
Madrid*

"Thank you for a fantastic and inspiring master class and the outstanding concert! My students profited a lot from the class, and we have lots of interesting issues to discuss!"

*Anna Lindell
Violin Professor
Royal Academy, Stockholm*
