

Summer Star Foundation's Musical Gift

By Amanda Schkeeper
and Melissa Korzec

The Indiana University Jacobs School of Music is deeply grateful to Ms. Shalin Liu, MA'77, president of the Summer Star Foundation for Nature, Arts, and Humanity, for her incredibly generous support of the Fairview Elementary School String Project. Thanks to her magnanimity, now, on any given day, the 46 first-grade students at Bloomington's Fairview Elementary School are able to further their music education in ways they may have never imagined.

Originally from Taiwan, Liu studied philosophy and literature at Taiwan University. She later relocated to the United States, where she pursued her master's degree in East Asian Studies at IU. She later moved to the Boston area, raised a family, and worked at Harvard University's Harvard-Yenching Library and the Harvard Law School library.

Liu visited Bloomington in October 2008 and met with Dr. Lissa May, chair of the Music Education Department and Professor Brenda Brenner, associate professor of music and assistant director of the IU Pre-College String Program. May and Brenner described the details of the Fairview String Project, which brings a hands-on music education to students younger than those usually given violin instruction. They also explained several goals of the project—one being to demonstrate the enduring value of music at the outset of a student's education. Liu shared in their passion for the program, since it connects the Jacobs School of Music to the Bloomington public schools and brings music instruction to underprivileged children.

Liu has been interested in humanity and patronage all of her life and has an indisputable interest in everything around her. Her philanthropic nature was apparent at a very early age, when she was just a student in Taipei and heard that a former classmate had lost a leg in an accident. Liu contacted the son of a government leader, imploring him to help her injured colleague. With her persistence, the boy received an artificial leg and was able to walk again.

Liu's kindness and philanthropic endeavors continue now through the Summer Star Foundation for Nature, Arts, and Humanity. The foundation is a nine-year-old non-profit organization based in Greater Boston which provides support for establishing educational programs to enrich children's lives through arts and nature programs. More than 1,000 children and students are touched by the Summer Star Foundation each year through programs at places such as UMASS Lowell, TUFTS Wildlife Clinic, Yellowstone National Park, Chinese Youth Summer Camp, Taiwanese organizations such as Pingtung University and Society of Wilderness, and, now, the Indiana University Jacobs School of Music—through the Fairview Elementary School String Project.

When the program originated, its mission seemed to align perfectly with what Liu and the Summer Star Foundation exist to do: benefit the lives of young people. Liu says that her heart has always been attached to Bloomington, not only because it was the first place that she lived in the United States, but also because she was so drawn to the town itself. She has always desired to do something that would help Bloomington as well as IU students who, for several years, call the town home, just as she did. The Jacobs School family and the Bloomington Community are deeply grateful to Liu and the Summer Star Foundation for Nature, Arts, and Humanity. Through their generosity, many students will have a unique opportunity. It is a rare circumstance to find a person more genuinely dedicated to the human race than Shalin Liu, and she is a gem that Indiana University and Bloomington are lucky to have. ●
